PAKISTAN SITUATION

PEOPLE AFFECTED

Months since the worst floods in Pakistan's history, hunger and poverty is rising among survivors and millions of people are still homeless, struggling to feed their families and unable to access basic healthcare. The floods have caused billions of dollars of damage to homes, roads, health facilities, and other vital infrastructure, but the long-term impact is increasing:

- Nine million more people are expected to be pushed into poverty this year.
- Emergency levels of hunger have more than tripled since the floods.
- Two million people are spending the harsh winter in makeshift shelters, as large-scale reconstruction of homes has not yet begun and aid agencies are still struggling to provide emergency shelter.
- In the freezing winter, elderly people, pregnant women and infants are without access to basic healthcare. More than 2,000 health facilities were affected by the floods and hundreds of these are still damaged or destroyed or have run out of essential medicine.
- Many rural schools are still underwater or unusable, meaning that children have already missed out on months of schooling.
